

Travel Awareness Safety Course

Tuesday 28th February 2012 – Aberdeen

Venue: Skene House, 96 Rosemount Viaduct, Aberdeen

With ongoing instability in the Middle East and North Africa; ongoing tensions and violence in Nigeria and unrest in Kazakhstan in recent months, the risks to industry employees travelling internationally continue to cause concern. Indeed as potentially lucrative market places like Iraq open for business or as companies look towards re-entry into Libya or for market access to China, the security and political risk challenges facing both those on short-term business trips or on longer periods of deployment are plentiful and real.

Knowing what risks are real and how to mitigate them can alleviate fears, increase productivity, demonstrate duty of care, and reduce the cost of doing business and working in some of the world's more challenging operating environments.

The thorough preparation of industry employees for travel to distant and often difficult locations is of paramount importance and training remains an integral part of this preparation.

Join International Security and Risk Mitigation Company AKE for a one-day travel safety training course in Aberdeen.

Places are limited so early booking is recommended. The one-day course is certificated and runs in connection with the Africa Business Centre although it covers global risks.
